

MRS. SASS WINS CAR IN NEWSPAPER CONTEST

Two Former Mokena Men Killed in Air Crash Wednesday

Word was received in Mokena Wednesday afternoon of a fatal plane accident which took the lives of two former Mokena residents, A. S. Bender, 52 and his son A. Chaney, 24.

The Benders built the lovely home south of Mokena, on the west side of Wolf road and now owned and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Philip Lenz.

As far as can be determined the Benders were flying a monoplane southwest and crashed at Chanahan at about noon. The wing fell off the plane and it struck in a field east of Center street. The plane came thru an overcast sky about 400 feet above the ground, caught fire and landed across the street in the front yard of the Harvey Crane home. The house caught fire and the Chanahan and Joliet fire departments responded and soon brought the blaze under control.

Mrs. Crane and two children were in the house at the time of the crash. She became frightened and had to be assisted to a place of safety.

One theory brought forth is that the pilot might have been racing the engine.

A. S. Bender was secretary of the Dealers Transport Co. of Chicago and A. Chaney Bender was the husband of the former Florine Klatt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Klatt of Joliet and former Mokena residents. They made their home in Chicago.

The following workers in the campaign received 20 per cent commission on all new subscriptions and renewals turned in:

1. Mrs. Mary Ritchey, Orland Park, 22,685,000 votes,
2. Mrs. Charles Hostert, Mokena 21,255,000 votes,
3. Mrs. Creta Keuch, Tinley Park, 21,155,000 votes,
4. Mrs. Roy Erdman, Mokena, 8,900,000 votes,
5. Mrs. Lawrence Crouse, New Lenox, 6,885,000 votes.

The judges spent all Saturday afternoon in the newspaper plant in Mokena checking the records on the campaign, and their findings tallied exactly with the records of the campaign manager, Marvin Smith. They went through the figures thoroughly and made a complete audit of the entire campaign.

Judges were Walter Schussler, mayor of Orland Park, and assistant cashier of the Orland State bank, Harry Mager, president and cashier of the Bremen State bank, Tinley Park, and Everett Cooper, cashier of the Mokena State bank.

The audit was completed at 6:35 Saturday evening, after which the judges issued this statement: "To Whom it May Concern: We, the undersigned, have examined the records of the Semmler Newspapers subscription campaign, and have found them to be correct to the best of our ability."

(Signed) Harry A. Mager, judge (Signed) W. R. Schussler, judge (Signed) Everett Cooper, judge

"We find the following to be first, second, third, fourth and fifth place winners" (Here the names and prizes and votes stated above were shown).

Mrs. Margaret Semmler, publisher, then made announcement of the winners. Those who had participated in this six-week campaign were assembled in the shop. Mrs. Semmler read the statement of the judges and the winners they had declared, starting from the bottom, and the checks were presented on the spot. The new Ford stood outside the door awaiting its owner.

There was a little weeping—tears of joy only—for, fortunately, nobody was disappointed and one or two were happily surprised.

This highly successful campaign was topped with a dinner given by Mrs. Semmler at Schrage's restaurant, north of Mokena. Thirty six guests sat down to a delicious roast beef dinner at 8:30 that evening. Attending the dinner were the candidates and their husbands, the contest judges and their wives, members of the working force of the Mokena plant, campaign manager Marvin Smith, and the family of Mrs. Semmler, Mr. and Mrs. Ramon Westlund and son Dale, and Miss Adeline Semmler.

After dinner Mrs. Semmler addressed the assembly and announced that in this campaign

Christmas Party At St. Mary's Saturday, Dec. 12

A Christmas Party and sale will be held in St. Mary's hall Saturday evening, Dec. 12, starting at 8 o'clock. There will be beautiful gifts for grownups, hand made aprons, and a choice of many Christmas gifts and toys for the girls and boys, including outstanding dolls. Games will be played and refreshments served.

Everybody is welcome and can be sure of having a pleasant evening.

1321 new subscribers had been added to the newspapers lists. She stated that there were also many renewals, and that it was very gratifying to learn that wherever it was impossible to give a new subscription, subscribers renewed for one or two years in order to help their favorite campaign.

Mrs. Semmler thanked the candidates for the hard, untiring efforts they had put forth in this campaign, and also desires by this means, to thank all the wonderful people of this area for having given the candidates such hearty support. She expressed the hope that the new subscribers will find their paper to be so interesting that they will never want to be without it; that she realized the responsibility to these new subscribers which must be measured up to now, and that every effort will be made to meet this responsibility; furthermore, this can best be done if every reader will cooperate by sending in news item developments which this paper will be very glad to receive.

She pointed out we are here in a little corner of the universe where we all love and know one another and have many friends, and visit back and forth and enjoy our home town paper. She drew a parallel between these happy conditions and life behind Iron Curtain where newspapers are either strictly censored or banned. A contest of this kind, she pointed out, could never have been conducted in Russia under prevailing conditions, as there is no free press there.

Mrs. Semmler stated that this was the fourth such contest run by the Semmler Newspapers in their 36 year history, in each of which a new automobile was the first prize; that the last contest was conducted 17 years ago, and that this contest was handled in the nicest and most businesslike manner of any. She praised Manager Smith for his ability shown and the fairness in his dealing with each contestant.

Mrs. Semmler concluded her talk by reading a poem which a friend had sent her recently.

This poem had been read at a meeting of publishers, and as it seemed particularly apropos for this occasion, Mrs. Semmler read it at the dinner:

"A hundred years? Go mind your tongue!
The evening star is not that young!
A hundred years? Don't be so dumb!
Each issue's a millenium.
To those who put the sheet to press,
With heart and soul in each caress,
Of copy, pencil, type and stone
Each day's a thousand years alone."

Following Mrs. Semmler's talk campaign manager Marvin Smith spoke briefly. He pointed out how happy he was that all the candidates had worked so beautifully together, that there was no friction, no spirit of rivalry, no antagonism of any kind. He furthermore stated that this campaign was one of the most successful that his company, the Marion Circulation Co. of Marion, Iowa—had ever conducted. He was sorry to have to leave this community, as the people had all been so congenial and he had enjoyed working in this area very much. He felt keenly for those who had worked so hard for first prize but had failed to make it, but there was no evidence of disappointment on the part of any of the candidates, as all seemed well satisfied with their awards.

The judges were called upon to say a few words, and all were unanimous on this point that a splendid job of record-keeping had been done throughout the campaign.

Mrs. Semmler introduced the other guests, who either took a bow or said a few words. After a few pictures were taken by Robert Porter of Frankfort, this pleasant get together came to an end.

BABSON SAYS—

Babson Discusses our Health and Prosperity

I have an idea that has been chasing me around lately and I want to share it with you. I am beginning to wonder what effect our national mental health may have on the business cycle and continued prosperity.

Human nature tells us that our emotions influence our behavior in more situations than we would like to admit. Psychologists point out, for example, that after the successful salesman has tried all his appeals to our logic, and failed, he burrows away at our emotions. More often than not we succumb to the emotional appeal. Certainly, if we have ever had the opportunity to attend a town meeting we know the the emotional appeal of some individual will override all the logic. Every national political election has been won by emotional upheaval rather than by common sense. Probably it was Eisenhower's appeal to mothers, sisters, wives, and sweethearts, relative to Korea which won his election. If, then, it is true that emotion plays such an important part in our individual lives, and on our political scene, is it not just as possible that how we feel about business conditions may actually affect the conditions themselves? We surely know that confidence is a very important factor in banking, manufacturing and buying.

Businessmen are impatient with sociologists and anthropologists and psychologists because their experiments take so long to complete, and are so costly. If, however, some practical minded social scientists would team up with a group of open minded businessmen to study the effect of our national mental health upon the business cycle and prosperity, I forecast great discoveries would follow.

The longer I have worked on the problem of forecasting, the more I have wondered if there is not some unknown spiritual and mental factor that affects other economic prognostications. At the turn of the century, Harvard's famed Doctor Cannon said that 50% of the patients who came into his office for medical care had nothing wrong with them physically. Their ills were psychosomatic, that is, mental and emotional. If we will add to these the huge numbers who are partially psychosomatic but who never visit a doctor, we must conclude that millions are ill because they think they are ill, and millions are poor or discouraged because they think they are.

We all know what a positive effect such forces as religion and psychiatry have had in building entirely new successful and happy personalities. We know from studies made by industry itself, that the cause of many costly strikes is not economic. Rather, they are emotional in origin. More important than wages is a desire for recognition, security, and individual attention. Business depressions may be considerably affected by emotional upsets.

I wonder what might happen at this point in the business cycle if business and people continued to feel confident and optimistic, irrespective of what the bankers forecast. While most economists forecast a business decline in 1953, employment has hit an all time high thus far. Production, wages, and earnings are now higher for 1953 than for 1952. The dollar has been stabilized; costs of certain basic needs, like food, autos, and clothing have ceased to climb. Inflation has been halted. We have tremendous market potential in the form of our ripening crop of war babies. Satisfying these wants and demands could conceivably absorb the products of expanded plant facilities for some time to come. I just wonder if we are not now placing the cart before the horse in thinking only of money, employment, and sales as criteria for prosperity. It may be that our spiritual and mental health affects business conditions.—I don't know.

Testing for TB

She's having a tuberculin test to find out if she has any TB germs. If she has a reaction, a chest X-ray and other tests will be made to determine whether active disease is present. Tuberculin testing is one of the activities of the voluntary tuberculosis associations supported by the sale of Christmas Seals, being conducted from Nov. 16 to Christmas.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

A Case of "Moostaken" Identity

Slim Smith never had a chance to use his moose call until a trip north this year. Visited him yesterday to see what he'd bagged.

"First day out," he told me, "I picked up a trail. I sounded the call and waited. Then I heard a moose call. Sure enough, something came crashing through the brush. But it was another guy with his moose call. Boy, did I get my finger off the trigger in a hurry!"

"My last day there I picked up another trail. This time I got me a real moose. But you can bet I took a good look before I did any shooting!"

From where I sit, we could all learn a little from Slim's experience. Most of us are guilty sometime or other of being too quick on the trigger. Like the fellow who would deny me the right to an occasional glass of beer with my dinner. I say that kind of "aim" is way off!

Orland High Wins First Conference Game With O. Lawn

Orland-Palos High put its first basketball conference game in the win column when the varsity clashed with Oak Lawn's quintet Friday night, December 4, on the Orland court. Both teams were evenly matched with see-saw scoring from start to finish. At the half the Eagles of Orland trailed by four points. Don Schroeder was high point man for Orland. Oak Lawn had a strong goal defense but was overcome in the final quarter which ended with Orland Park 33, Oak Lawn 30.

will be played tomorrow night, Friday, when the Eagles face the varsity of Rich High in Park Forest. Thanksgiving Eve the Eagles traveled south to play Beecher, Beecher put up a good stand against the blue and gold, but although Beecher edged out the fresh-soph. 48-41, they were rolled over by the varsity from Orland.

The crowd watched breathlessly as the Eagles overcame Beecher, 64-56.

NEW PLANT—

Victor John Andrew, six foot three, 225 pound giant-of-a-man who is the head of this organization, has been an "improviser" since his high school days in Wooster, Ohio. Born on a farm in nearby Medina County, August 31, 1902, he set up "shop" as a teenager in the back seat of his car and set forth as Wooster's first mobile radio serviceman. He was a "ham operator" at 15, and during his undergraduate days at Wooster college, worked on radio wave propagation in association with the U. S. Naval Lab at Washington. Graduating with a Bachelor of Science degree in 1926, he became a junior engineer at the U. S. Signal Corps Lab at Ft. Monmouth, New Jersey.

Resolved to learn radio engineering via the scientific, or pure, approach, he entered the University of Chicago for a master's degree in physics. His thesis on radio wave propagation so impressed Westinghouse engineers that they offered him a job at the firm's radio transmitter plant at Chicopee Falls, Mass. Later, the Department of Commerce selected him to head up its development program for frequency measuring equipment at Grand Island, Neb.

Shooting for a doctor's degree, Mr. Andrew returned to the University of Chicago in 1930 and branched into x-ray theory and the study of cosmic rays. He was one of 13 scientists who accompanied Nobel prize winner Arthur Compton on a cosmic ray measuring expedition to Mt. Evans, Col. After taking a PhD in physics in 1932, he returned to Westinghouse as a designer of X-ray tubes at its Bloomfield, New Jersey plant. Two years later, he joined Doolittle & Falknor, Chicago consulting engineers, and when Frank Falknor left the firm in 1933 to become chief engineer at WBBM Chicago, Dr. Andrew remained as chief engineer of Doolittle Radio, Inc.

Late in 1936, he hung out his own shingle—"Victor J. Andrew, Manufacturer and Consulting Engineer"—from a six-room rented house on Chicago's south side. His only employee was a high school boy, who helped out after school and on Saturdays.

At the end of two years, Dr. Andrew purchased a bungalow near Chicago's Municipal Airport, in the hope he could increase his revenue by working on ground stations for airlines. The idea clicked.

Demand for coaxial cables, his specialty, increased so much that in 1941 he found it necessary to take over a public garage with an area of 12,000 square feet, and in 1944 he acquired another garage and, later, a small office building, for a total of 40,000 square feet. Blueprints were started for a modern plant on 460 acres in suburban Orland Park, where the company maintains a small research laboratory.

On June 13, 1949, Wooster College honored Dr. Andrew with a Doctor of Science degree, awarded "on the basis of his scientific attainments."

While Dr. Andrew's hobby is economics and international travel, that of his wife, Aileen, is sociology. The Andrews were married in 1922 when she was employed with a Wall Street brokerage firm and he was at the Signal Corps Labs at nearby Fort Monmouth. Their two children, Edward 18, and Juanita 14, attended school in Havana. They speak Spanish fluently.

Dr. Andrew maintains engineering as well as economic contacts in all the Caribbean countries, Mexico and Central America.

Past Chairman of the Chicago Section of IRE and active in the Chicago Radio Engineers Club, he is author of 27 technical articles on all phases of radio engineering. In the field of broadcasting economics, he has written a continuing study of "Profit Opportunities for New Stations" in three annual installments and his "Industry Barometer," published in 1948, has been widely circulated.

One Human Race

Lesson for December 13, 1953

YOU can try a little experiment with your friends or your Sunday school class. Ask each one to think of a human being, any human being. Write it down if they like. Then go around the circle and see what kind of human beings they picked. It's a safe prediction that most of them will have selected a human being of their own race, somebody rather like them instead of someone different from them. In other words, when we think "human being" we think "somebody like me." Or in still other words, we think of ourselves as the "normal" human being and other kinds of people as "off-brands."

What Do You Mean by "One"?

The truth is that it really does take all kinds of people to make a world, hard as that is for everybody to believe. Furthermore, with all the bewildering differences there are in language, looks, culture, manners and morals, the human race is one. If there is anything quite clear in the New Testament, this is it. All human beings are human, not one is sub-human. If other races seem peculiar to you, so peculiar you even wonder why God made them, remember you seem just as peculiar to them.

But what is the one-ness of the human race? It is true, all of us in the big collection of living animals called "mankind" have many points in common that are not very important, some that are not important at all. We all walk on two legs, not four—but so do penguins. We all know pleasure and pain—but so do cats. We must all die—but so must grasshoppers. We all came, probably, from the common set of ancestors—but so presumably did catfish. There is something far more important than our brain, our hand, our nervous system or our digestive tract that marks us as one race. It is the fact which only religion acknowledges, but a fact of deepest importance: We are all children of God and made in his image. God made us of many kinds; but he also made us "of one," in unity, for unity. We are one because there is one "Lord of all."

If One, Then What?

If the oneness of the human race is taken seriously, then some practical results follow. This is not all theory. It is something we can live by. For one thing, whenever we have any contact with any human being we have to remember that he is a human being, and that so far as we are concerned that is the most important fact about him. He may have a different color, he may talk in strange gibberish, his customs may seem to be topsy-turvy, he may not know how to eat with a spoon. His ideas may be quite the reverse of ours, his religion may be weird nonsense and his whole mental workings as hard to follow as the flight of bats. But nevertheless the thing that unites him with you is more vital than the things that mark him off from you. You belong to the same human race.

Furthermore, if it is true, as said above, that what gives the human race its unity is the fact that we are all creatures of the same Father-God, then in all dealings with other people, even when they misunderstand God (as fetish worshippers do) or even deny his very existence, as most Russians do, we must remember always: Their God and ours are the same. They may not know it, but it is so. All this adds up to the point that we have no right to despise or look down on any member of the human race, nor they on us. At the foot of God's throne we all are on level ground.

Even A Saint Can Forget This

One of the Bible readings tells of an incident in the life of St. Peter. God had already shown him, as it were by a miracle, that "God is no respecter of persons," but at Antioch he forgot it. Forgot it so far that he would not even eat with some persons of a different race than his own, even though they were all Christians too. So it is easy to read these words, and it was not hard to write them, that all human beings are one.

Legal "Numbers Game" Keeps Sec. Carpentier On The Jump

Springfield, Ill. — Secretary of State Charles F. Carpentier is busily engaged in trying to keep from being buried under the avalanche of requests for special license plate numbers which the motorists of Illinois are mailing to him by the thousands each day.

Numerous requests are from motorists asking reassignment of their present number—a privilege available to license plate holder under section 8 of the Illinois Motor Vehicle Act. The vast majority, however, are from persons who are hoping against hope that the license number they are requesting will be unassigned. "If it is," Secretary Carpentier said, "they will get it."

A great number of the requests are coming from persons who believe that, with a Republican in the office of the Secretary of State for the first time in 20 years, there will be a wholesale turnover in the low-digit license holders, with deserving members of the party in power taking over the two, three and four number license plates.

"Apparently many of these persons do not know, or fail to realize," Secretary Carpentier said, "that under Section 8 of the Motor Vehicle Act the Secretary of State has absolutely no control over any license number if the holder of it desires to retain it and makes application for reassignment at any time during the period from October 1 to November 1."

Secretary Carpentier then added a word of comfort for present holders of low numbers who have also been fearful of a license plate purge in the low number divisions. "No person who requests reassignment of his present number need fear that he won't get it. He will. That's the law, and I intend to see to it that the law is carried out to the letter. If I catch any of my employees engaging in any type of 'numbers' game—out they'll go."

Total requests for special numbers, Secretary Carpentier said, has reached the point where it is no longer possible or feasible to acknowledge them. Persons making such requests will discover whether they were successful when their 1954 set of license plates reaches them by mail. According to Secretary Carpentier, this should be shortly after December 1.

Reasons set forth by the motorists in their letters requesting a particular number range from the sublime—love—to the trivial—bad memory for big numbers. One motorist wants a three number license because he is certain it will insure his retaining the love of his life although he didn't offer to return it if it failed. Another wanted a three digit plate because he has had difficulty remembering his four-number plate. Laugh of the week was produced by a motorist, now the proud possessor of a very low three-number plate, who was willing to give it up for any one of the two-digit series.

Secretary Carpentier also revealed that studies of the Illinois system of licensing, which have been under way since his assumption of the duties of Secretary of State last January, indicate that the present method of distribution is by far the most economical and probably the most efficient. According to Secretary Carpentier, proponents of other systems fail to take into consideration the tremendous increase in costs which would result from the various other methods of distribution that have been suggested.

"I originally thought that another method of distribution and numbering might be better," Secretary Carpentier said, "until I got into the problem. Then I immediately saw that costs would soar and I wondered who was supposed to pay the increase. As far as I am concerned, the average motorist is already paying enough. I think we should stick to this system until we find one that is cheaper and better. So far we haven't found one and we have studied numerous systems in operation in other states."

It is the additional expense attendant upon the legal reassignment of special numbers that draws Secretary Carpentier's particular fire. "I know that these persons are paying their license fees several months in advance of the due date," Carpentier said, "but it would make for greater efficiency in our operation if we didn't have to pull out more than 250,000 reassignment requests before we begin our across the counter and direct mail sale. It costs the state approximately one dollar each to handle reassignment requests."

BABSON SAYS—

Many articles have been written about the continuing rapid increase of U. S. population, which is now over 160,000,000. They all read in a bullish vein and are presented as a cause for great future prosperity. This week—however—I will present another side to this story—namely, what the expected future increase may mean to your children and grandchildren.

The first reason is that there are now more births. The second reason is that there now are fewer deaths proportionately. Deaths among babies are much fewer—while almost everyone is living longer, due to better food, shorter hours, saner habits, and improved medical care. Also the following statistics given me by the Editor of MASS TRANSPORTATION are suggestive.

Since 1940, which was only 13 years ago, a new "public" has come into being. Fourteen million old customers have died. More than 17 million marriages have taken place. More than 30 million babies have been born. More than one-third of all present families in the U. S. have been formed. Of the more than 150 million people in the U. S. today, 63 per cent do not remember World War I. Until this year, 52 per cent did not remember a Republican Administrator in the White House.

All the above now results in one baby being born every eight seconds and someone dying every twenty-one seconds. In addition, one immigrant enters the U. S. every two minutes and leaves every seven minutes. I have no figures on the probable increase in the number of families; but this will be very much less.

These facts would appear to require more schools, more roads, more houses, and even more telephones, automobiles, refrigerators, television sets, etc. I hope this will be true; but not necessarily. Present school-houses could take care of the present population by being operated on two shifts. Our roads may now be overbuilt. The number of houses needed depends upon families, not on persons. In the house in which I was born at 58 Middle Street, Gloucester, Mass., one of my ancestors had 21 children.

The population increase which comes from living longer presents a problem for our children. When parents or grandparents receive Old-Age Assistance, or Pensions, or even Social Security, the money does not come "from the blue sky." All such benefits must be paid for by the younger people in the form of taxes or a higher price for the goods they are to buy. Taxes should decline somewhat next year, but the decline will not be permanent.

Even the Welfare Funds which organized labor is now demanding will increase prices unless the workers increase their production accordingly. "Security" must always be paid for by someone. Otherwise, it is like depending upon aspirin to cure a disease. These Funds will not remedy the real trouble. To have this large increase in population with a high standard of living, we must conserve our natural resources. This means avoiding waste of everything, from oil to trees. Our woodlands and soils must especially be protected—yes, and even the fish of the oceans. It is utterly foolish to talk about "great future prosperity" unless we train our children to be less wasteful.

Another thought. We have only to travel in Asia and Africa to know that population alone does not make prosperity. In fact, a large population may make for poverty. For our grandchildren to enjoy prosperity, much more attention must be devoted to spiritual training, the development of good habits, and the arousing within the souls of all people a desire to work and produce. Hence, the great importance of churches.

U. S. A.—1975

Questions and Answers
1. What is the population growth in prospect for this nation by 1975? Projections based on estimates by the Social Security Administration indicate that if a medium birth rate prevails, our U. S. population will be 33 million larger in 1975—rising from 157 million in 1952 to 190 million in 1975.

2. What effect will this growth have on the economy of the nation? Such a growth in population will require a tremendous expansion of job opportunities, increased output of goods and services, expansion of existing business facilities and starting of new businesses, billions of additional investment for this expansion. New market potentials for industry, farm, and other businesses will be greatly increased.

3. How many additional people will be in the labor force by 1975 as a result of the increasing population? An official projection of the U. S. Census Bureau forecasts a total labor force of 88.6 million for April, 1975. The 1952 labor force was 66.5 million. Increase by 1975—22.1 million. Should population grow more rapidly than anticipated, the total labor force would be proportionately larger by 1975.

4. If jobs are provided for the new people entering the labor force by 1975, what is the potentiality in total wages and salaries? If jobs are provided for all those entering the labor force between 1952 and 1975, and if past trends continue, and assuming sharply increased production, the total wages and salaries could be expected to rise to $350 billion in 1975. This projection by NAM assumed wages and salaries will be about half of gross national product, as in 1952. Wages and salaries would, thus, be about $166.4 billion higher than in 1952, when the figure was $183.6 billion.

5. What might be the increase in gross national product by 1975 if the other potentialities are realized?

If new investment permits necessary business expansion and provides jobs for 22 million new workers by 1975 which are as productive as today's jobs, gross national product might be expected to rise from $348 billion (1952) to about $700 billion in 1975. This assumes a 3% annual increase over a 1963 estimate of 475-500 billion in the President's Economic Report of January 1953.

6. What is the 1975 potentiality for national income? Should gross national product increase to the $700 billion level possible by 1975, national income, another measure of our national well-being can be expected to rise from $291.6 billion in 1952 to some $600 billion in 1975.

7. What are the keys to realizing these potentialities? Production of the goods and services which go into our standard of living depends upon natural resources (land), labor, and capital. Natural resources are available in sufficient quantity to enable Americans to continue to improve their living standards as much in the years to come as they have improved them in the past. There is the possibility, of course, that capital needed for the processing of these natural resources may not be available in the necessary amounts. The expected one-third increase in our labor force between 1952 and 1975 should provide us with enough workers to produce the additional goods and services needed, if capital is available to provide these additional workers with tools and equipment at least equal to those of today's workers. Providing the capital needed by 1975 is a problem. Cuts in taxes to restore the ability of Americans to save, and their incentive to invest the amounts needed, appears to be a major key to a future of peacetime prosperity.

8. What are the ingredients of the individual enterprise system? The individual enterprise system which has given us so much in the past and can provide us with even more in the future, is based on four fundamental principles. These are: 1. Supremacy of the individual; 2. Hope of reward or compensation; 3. Right to accumulate and use private property; and 4. Free competition.

9. Why does it take $12,000 to supply each job? There is no magic in the figure $12,000. It merely represents the current value of America's total productive assets, frequently referred to loosely as "buildings, equipment, and tools"—divided by the number of jobholders. There is a direct relationship, however, between the output of workers and the machines they use. Our production and our living standards are higher than elsewhere in the world because our average investment of $12,000 behind each of today's jobs is higher. If American workers of the future are to be as productive as those of today, it appears that they must, on the average, be at least as well supported by capital investments.

10. What is wrong with expanding business on borrowed capital? There is nothing really wrong in expanding business by borrowing. But such action is dangerous because failure of a company to pay interest or repay its loans on schedule may force it into bankruptcy. Dividend payments to stockholders, on the other hand, are not fixed, but generally vary from year to year according to the earnings of the company. Failure to pay a dividend or common stock in any one period does not, therefore, threaten the very existence of a company. Financing business expansion through borrowing may also have the undesirable effect of weakening competition because, obviously, money can be borrowed easily only by established concerns with a good record.

Area Residents Get Chance to Hear Great Books Talks

Adult residents of the Chicago Area are again being given the opportunity to attend the series of lectures sponsored by the Chicago Committee for The Great Books in association with University College.

This is due to the tremendous response with which the series was received last year, according to Walter W. Kester, 17950 S. Sayre, Mrs. Walter Fierke, 17119 67th Ct., both of Tinley Park, who are members of the Chicago Committee for The Great Books and active in this program. The lectures will be held once a month, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., 32 West Randolph St.

Like the neighborhood Great Books Discussion Group, the lectures are concerned with the reading and discussion of the great books of the Western world. This eight series lecture program presents the systematic development of an idea—"What in the deepest sense, is a successful life?" and some of the great solutions proposed to this complex problem.

Additional information regarding the lecture series may be obtained from the representative of the Chicago Committee for The Great Books, Miss Natalie Wells, 37 South Wabash Avenue, DEarborn 2-5870 or Galway Kinnell, University College 19 South LaSalle street, DEarborn 2-7245 or any Great Books Discussion Group leader.

Great Books Lecture Series are on the following subjects: Did Freud believe in the good life? David Riesman, Professor of Social Sciences at the University of Chicago. A social psychologist and the author of The Lonely Crowd, recently reprinted in the distinguished Doubleday Anchor classics.

The Good Life in the Bible; A Protestant interpretation. Bernard M. Loomer, Dean of the Divinity School at the University of Chicago.

Pericles and the good life. Robert M. Hutchins, Associate Director of the Ford Foundation Pasadena, California.

The stoic view of the good life. John J. Glanville, Professor of Philosophy at the University of Notre Dame.

William Faulkner: A Novelist's view of the good life. Malcolm Cowley, For 15 years associate editor of the New Republic. Free lance writer, translator and literary critic. Author of Exile's Return and editor of the Viking Portable Editions of Hemingway, Hawthorne and Faulkner.

Shakespeare's King Lear: Good from Evil. Charles G. Bell, Assistant Professor of Humanities at the University of Chicago. Author of the book of poems, Songs for a New America, which will appear this fall.

The Peasant's View of the Good Life. Robert Redfield, Distinguished Service Professor of Anthropology at the University of Chicago. This lecture will be based on his twenty years experience among the folk communities of Mexico and Yucatan.

Easy Money For 3 Housewives

By Quinone

Three industrious housewives of this area—Alice, Lillian and Marge—wanted to make a little easy money picking apples, and at the same time get some of that fine country air and sunshine. They knew of others who were making good money picking apples, so why couldn't they? They tried it and the results were nothing short of comical—such monkey tarzan antics and aching muscles, tangled hair and sunburn—and education!

The fruit farmer gave the three housewives each a container that opens at the bottom when you unload the fruit—this contraption when figured out is hung from the shoulders while picking.

"Gosh that looks easy," remarked Lillian, "I'll have a basket filled in no time." But after she emptied a load and re-climbed the tree, she kept hearing the fruit hitting the ladder rung. "Just overripe fruit falling," she called out then, "Oh darn it! I forgot to seal up the bottom of the bag!"

"Such beauties!" says Alice and promptly rushes to gather the dropped ones from the ground. The boss was "Johnny on the spot." Said he "Never pick apples off the ground, they are bruised."

Marge proudly climbed the 20-foot tree, showing no fear of height, and even so the best apples seemed to be just a wee bit beyond her tall outstretched reach. "Gosh, I hate to let those big red delicious ones stay up there," she panted as she descended the ladder—lugged it to a new position and doggedly climbed up again and got them. It wasn't long before a veteran advised the three housewives not to waste time on such small moves of the ladder. You should always start from the bottom so you can get the apples on the lower branches first that might otherwise be knocked off.

The peculiar growth habit of this fruit makes it a "must" to snip the stem below the bud of next years apple—requiring both hands for this operation for these beginners.

While Lillian reached one direction, the wind swayed the other way and she wrestled with the unsteady ladder dangerously but successfully. More advice from the veteran: "Always place the ladder in a fork or so faces toward the trunk of the tree to break your fall."

Besides learning these apple picking tricks, the trio decided they never worked so hard for so little! But they knew, of course, that it's all in knowing how. They were mere "greenhorns" and one must learn. They staggered to the car, rubbing their sore shoulders pinched by basket straps, bravely managed to get home with their financial gain of three dollars to be split three ways. Even so they are proud of their daring achievement and now look back to their easy money days.

Christian Science Churches

That we can with confidence trust God to meet our every need, satisfy every longing, and establish complete harmony, will be explained in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, December 13. The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be God the Preserver of Man.

The Golden Text is from Psalms (40:11) "Withhold not thou thy tender mercies from me, O Lord; let thy loving kindness and thy truth continually preserve me."

Lesson-Sermon passages from the Bible (King James Version) include:

"The Lord hath appeared of old unto me, saying, Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love: therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee. For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and ransomed him from the hand of him that was stronger than he." (Jer. 31:3,11).

Correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, include:

"The history of Christianity furnishes sublime proofs of the supporting influence and protecting power bestowed on man by his heavenly Father, omnipotent Mind, who gives man faith and understanding whereby to defend himself, not only from temptation, but from bodily suffering." (p. 387).
